Prisoner Of War Conduct Code Guarantees In Could Reach Into Everyday Life Atomic Trade Are Needed

By CHARLES CORDERY

United Press Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON, Aug. 18 (AP) — The United States set out today to arm its fighting men with the toughest mental weapons demanded by its new code of conduct for prisoners of war.

An Armed Forces training program which eventually could reach into schools, the home and church in combat and in the classroom was ordered for all men in uniform by President Eisenhower Wednesday night in laying down the historic six-point code for men in combat and captivity.

But the men who drew the code made it clear the military alone cannot arm young Americans with the mental weapons they will need if they fall captive in future wars. "Moral character and basic beliefs" must be instilled at home, in church, and in the classroom long before a young man enters military service, the Code of Conduct Committee said.

A Defense Department report said the new code was drawn up because "the Korean story must never be permitted to happen again." The report referred to Red torture and brainwashing faced by prisoners and the wide differences in individual ability to endure it.

Text Of Code
The text of the new code of conduct which President Eisenhower proclaimed Wednesday for American servicemen:

1. I am an American fighting man. I serve in the forces which guard my country and my way of life. I am prepared to give my life in its defense.

2. I will never surrender of my own free will. If in command I will never surrender my men while they still have the means to resist.

3. If I am captured I will continue to resist by all means available. I will make every effort to escape and aid others to escape. I will accept neither special favors nor special treatment from the enemy.

4. If I become a prisoner of war, I will give no information or take part in any action which might be harmful to my country. If I am a senior, I will take command. If not, I will obey the lawful orders of those appointed over me and will back them up in every way.

5. When questioned, should I become a prisoner of war, I am bound to give only my name, rank, service number and date of birth. I will evade answering further questions to the utmost of my ability. I will make no oral or written statements disloyal to my country and its allies or harmful to their cause.

6. I will never forget that I am an American fighting man, responsible for my actions, and dedicated to the principles which made my country free. I will trust in my God and in the United States of America.

Puts In Writing
These requirements already existed in every armed service, but the code puts them in writing.

With the stern new code, based on a tell-the-enemy-nothing philosophy, "Communist methods can be successfully combated," according to Assistant Defense Secretary Carl ter L. Burgess who headed the committee which drafted it. But "real success" will depend on enlightened training and education in American principles, he said.

Mr. Eisenhower promulgated the code at his vacation retreat in Fraser, Colo. His order directed the military services to give their men training to "counter and withstand all enemy efforts."

The Burgess Committee proposed that the services cooperate with educational institutions, churches and other patriotic organizations to "provide better understanding of American ideals."

The defense group pictured the new code as a subtle but not alone for fighting men but for all Americans in the atomic age when the "home front is but an extension of the fighting front."

Hurricane Damage High

RALEIGH, N.C., Aug. 18 (AP) — The storm battered coast of the Carolinas today counted millions of dollars in damage from Hurricane Diane, the second great storm to pass over the area within two weeks.

The howler, the second with hurricane force winds to materialize in the Atlantic this season, dissipated into heavy rains and weak winds of 20 to 35 miles an hour over Virginia Wednesday night after smashing into the North Carolina coast.

Gov. Luther H. Hodges said a hurricane "task force" of top state officials met today to survey damage caused by Diane and its predecessor Connie.

The once-powerful Diane lost its killing punch by the time it hit heavily populated areas along the coast Wednesday. Only one death was attributed directly to Diane. A second was caused indirectly by the storm. Hurricane Connie took a toll of 42 lives.

Diane's damage toll was expected to rise to a high figure. The storm ripped up highways well inland in North Carolina, smashed beach cottages, and tore through tobacco, corn and cotton acreage.

Another potential hurricane built up in the Atlantic as damage from Diane was being assessed.

A hurricane hunter plane was dispatched to investigate the "moderate easterly wave" — a band of showers — located some 1,500 miles east of Puerto Rico.

Authorities said Diane added millions of dollars in damage to the 30 million dollars in destruction wreaked along the south Atlantic seaboard by Hurricane Connie.

New Polio Cases In Nation Have Jumped

WASHINGTON, Aug. 18 (AP) — The U.S. Public Health Service said today that the number of new polio cases reported last week jumped 26 per cent over the previous week.

The service also noted a rapid increase in the disease's incidence in Wisconsin in addition to Massachusetts, which has been hit by an epidemic.

It said that 1,781 new cases were reported last week as compared to 1,412 in the previous week. This total, however, was six per cent less than the 1,904 reported for the comparable week last year.

In the four weeks ended Aug. 13, the service said the number of polio cases increased rapidly in Wisconsin. The state reported 40, 56, 105, and 135 new cases respectively in the four weeks.

Although Massachusetts reported a 30 per cent increase in new cases last week, the state's department of public health said there was little extension of the disease.

Guarantees In Atomic Trade Are Needed

GENEVA, Aug. 18 (AP) — A member of the U. S. Congressional Atomic Energy Committee warned today that further American help in a peaceful atomic energy program might enable other nations to build A-bombs.

Rep. Carl T. Durham (D-NC), veteran member of the committee, said there must be new guarantees of adequate control over the so-called "breeder reactors," which produce more fuel than they burn.

Durham issued his warning after hearing reports of progress on the reactors at the Atomic For Peace conference, which continued its technical meeting today.

Durham is one of 12 members of the Joint Congressional Atomic Committee who flew here today to observe the U.N. conference. They scheduled a press conference today to report on their findings.

"There must be new guarantees," Durham said, "to make sure that we have adequate controls on the use of all the fissionable material, atomic fuel, in overseas reactors we help build."

Right now the U.S. international atomic pool program includes a built-in safeguard against military use of fuel.

Fireman Recovering From Roach Bites

LOUISVILLE, Aug. 18 (AP) — John B. Conrad, a fireman, was recovering from a strange malady here today.

A physician said the welts on Conrad's body and his stomach disorder were the result of cockroach bites.

Conrad was attacked by the cockroaches while fighting a fire at the Grady Dunn Dump in Louisville on Aug. 7.

He said the two-inch long insects swarmed upon the hose he was using and over his body until he finally had to turn the fire hose on the bugs.

The doctor said Conrad's sickness was evidently an allergic reaction from the bites.

Korea, Japan Trade Banned

SEOUL, Korea, Aug. 18 (AP) — The Republic of Korea severed all trade relations with Japan today, plunging diplomatic relations between the two nations into deeper crisis.

There was no official announcement, but officials in Seoul said a blanket ban on Japanese trade became effective today.

The word spread rapidly through Korean and foreign business circles this afternoon, but no government official would say exactly when the order was handed down or how long the ban would last.

The trade ban came only a few hours after government spokesmen Hong Kee Karl issued a formal statement declaring that relations between South Korea and Japan were "reaching the breaking point."

Karl announced a ban on all travel by Koreans between the two nations.

He explained the action by saying, "The Japanese continue to seek to tie up with Communism and at the same time they refuse to withdraw their illegal claims to 85 per cent of Korean property."

Korea long under Japanese domination, achieved its freedom at the end of World War II though it was soon to be divided into a free south and a Communist north.

The Koreans have disliked and feared the Japanese "almost as much as they have the Communists and there has been a long series of incidents involving Japanese fishing boats and Korean naval vessels.

Chandler To Receive Jefferson County Support In Election

LOUISVILLE, Aug. 18 (AP) — The "closed ranks" in the Democratic Party circles requested by A. B. Chandler were closer to reality today as all Louisville and Jefferson County Democratic candidates voted unanimously to support "the entire Democratic ticket."

Chandler, Democratic gubernatorial nominee who will be opposed by Edwin R. Denney, Mount Vernon, in November, asked for party unity immediately after his nomination.

He was assured the backing of Gov. Lawrence W. Wetherby, Sens. Alben W. Barkley and Earle C. Clements, defeated candidate Bert T. Combs and other high officials in stiffly correct messages after the August primary.

Wetherby, however, made it clear at the recent Governors' Conference in Chicago that his support was given grudgingly and in name only.

Neither Barkley nor Clements is expected to campaign actively in Chandler's behalf because of the bitter charges hurled by Chandler and old political wounds which still rankle.

Wednesday's action here was the first official indication that Louisville candidates would work for the election of Chandler and other state candidates who won nomination on his slate.

The majority of the Louisville and Jefferson County candidates supported Combs in the primary. Jefferson County Judge Bertram C. Van Arsdale, a former Combs supporter, introduced the unity resolution and asked the Democratic County Executive Committee to comply with its provisions.

Building Improvements Made

The New Busses Purchased

The Calloway County Schools will open on Monday, August 29, according to an announcement made today by Burton Jeffrey, superintendent of Calloway County.

Jeffrey said he, the Calloway County Board of Education, and the teachers, extend a cordial welcome to every patron and friend to attend the opening of one of the following schools: Almo, Hazel, Lynn Grove, New Concord, Kirksey, Faxon, Coldwater, Dexter, and Independence.

The superintendent said he hoped that the patrons and friends of the school would visit them from time to time during the year as this is a great help to the children and teacher.

Improvements have been made on the school plants in the past few months by the County Board. Jeffrey said they include asphalt tile on some of the class floors, lunch rooms, and auditorium floors, new furniture, new windows, doors, panic release hardware, and exterior and interior painting.

Four auditoriums have been added or renovated and the new remaining ones are to be completed in the near future. Additional heaters and new new furnaces with stokers are being installed. Each of the five high schools and Faxon elementary have new roofs.

Three new busses have been ordered to add to the present fleet, Jeffrey said. The public is invited to stop by the new County School Bus garage, located on Chestnut Street, which has been purchased by the County Board and make a close inspection of the busses, garage, and equipment.

County Librarian
Mrs. Eva Ross will supervise the County Library program. It is the intention of the County Board to employ a full time music teacher along with other new additions during the ensuing year, Jeffrey said.

All county teachers will attend a work shop conference at Murray College August 22-23. The purpose of this conference is to improve methods of instruction, the superintendent added.

Jeffrey further said that any child that is six years of age by December 30 is eligible to enroll in school this year. If the child is entering school for the first time, a health certificate must be presented.

Free text books will be furnished to all students from the first to the eighth grades inclusive. Schools will dismiss in observance of Labor Day, Monday, September 5.

The superintendent said high school principals will notify their bus drivers to report at the school bus garage on Friday morning, August 26, from 7:30 to 12 o'clock to receive information as to bus routes, reports, and removal of busses from the garage.

Teachers

Politics In Church Discussed By Bishop
WILMORE, Aug. 17 (AP) — Bishop William T. Watkins Wednesday warned Methodists convening here that playing politics in regard to church affairs is inconsistent with both Christian and Methodist doctrine.

His message, delivered at the opening session of the annual Kentucky Methodist Conference at Asbury College here, warned against "practices which are all right in the secular political world, but which are evils when brought into church administration."

"It is not all right in the Methodist Church to seek position," he stated bluntly.

The officiant covered, "seeking an office in the church or to be elected a delegate to the general conference or any other special honor," which he termed "selfish ambition not consistent with the spirit of Christ."

He said the church believes in holding elections but expects character, ability, industry and leadership to be factors in attracting followers.

"Any minister who would support a particular man for a place of influence because he believes his chance of preferment would be greater does not belong in the Christian ministry," the bishop added.

HERE'S HOW...

MAKE LAWN STOOLS

A set of lawn stools adds to the enjoyment of backyard living. The stools may also be used indoors.

Make a seat frame, as shown, using 1 1/2 by 2-inch lumber and rounding the ends of the side rails. Cut a dado 4 inches from the end of each side rail, and a matching half-lap at the top of each 18-inch leg. Four inches from the bottom of each leg bore a 1-inch dowel hole.

Then bore the 3/4-inch holes for the rope mesh, as shown, matching the holes in opposite rails.

Assemble the stool, using waterproof glue at all joints. Use two No. 12 flathead wood screws, 2 1/2 inches long, to join side and end rails. Use four No. 12 screws, 1 1/2 inches long at each leg joint.

Add the dowel braces, gluing and pinning each joint with one 8-penny finishing nail.

Thread and weave 3/4-inch manila rope through the frame holes to form a mesh.

The seat is of foam rubber or other waterproof cushioning material.

Japan Eyes Bomb Defense Warily

By CHARLES M. McCANN

United Press Staff Correspondent

Japan does not look forward with any eagerness to the possibility that the United States might defend it with atomic weapons if it is attacked.

In fact, Premier Ichiro Hatoyama is faced with a political crisis partly because the United States is sending atomic weapons to Okinawa and Japan itself.

Unlabeled Hatoyama can effect a merger of his own Japan Democratic Party with the Liberals, he may be overthrown when Parliament meets in December.

There was a sensation in Tokyo when it was made known last week that the United States had sent a battery of atomic cannons to Okinawa and planned to send atomic rocket launchers to Japan.

The announcement could have been better timed.

Two Important Bills

First, Hatoyama was trying to push through a dying session of Parliament two important defense bills. One was to set up a national defense council to plan Japan's rearmament. The other was to set up a council to revise the 1947 constitution, which forbids Japan to arm.

Secondly, Japanese people were painfully aware that the 10th anniversary of the atomic bombing of Hiroshima falls on this Saturday, Aug. 6.

As the result of the announcement, the Socialists in the upper House of Parliament were able to talk the two measures to death.

Hatoyama can call a special session before December in an attempt to get the two measures approved. But he would be risking a disastrous defeat.

Hatoyama like his predecessor Shigeru Yoshida is loyally keeping Japan allied with the United States.

Unhappy About Arms

But while the Japanese people approve that alignment, they are noticeably unenthusiastic over the prospect of rearmament.

They know their great reform. A nation of about 70,000,000 people can not remain defenseless—or, in the long run, neutral.

But most Japanese people are facing the rearmament program reluctantly.

Especially, they want nothing more to do with atomic weapons. They had their share at Hiroshima and Nagasaki.

Quite naturally they figure also that if the United States used atomic weapons based on Japanese territory including atom-bomb carrying planes, an enemy based on

Scrap Market Is 'Run-A-Way'

NEW YORK — Iron Age said today the already harried steel industry is faced with another knotty problem — "a runaway scrap market."

Scrap prices have rocketed to near-record levels, the metal-working weekly said, giving the industry and Washington "a bad case of jitters."

On top of this the industry is juggling two other hot-potatoes: disgruntled customers and the necessity to take facilities out of production for much-needed repairs.

"The crisis in scrap" — as the trade journal described it — had top buyers and sellers of scrap and administration officials wading in Washington this week to wrestle with the problem.

"It will be a tough nut to crack," the magazine predicted.

Iron Age said discussions will center around controls of some kind to further restrict scrap exports — a move designed to ease the domestic supply problem.

"And it will cause a big ruckus between buyers and sellers," the magazine said. "It will also involve our allies and their need for scrap."

"Everybody involved will have to read softly. Because if scrap is controlled, why not control other materials, including finished steel?"

Meanwhile, Iron Age said, there are more dissatisfied steel consumers now than there were during the tight market of 1953.

"Everyone has the feeling he's being shortchanged. Some customers are facing the prospect of slowing their production lines if they don't get relief in a hurry."

"And the outlook for some of them is not too encouraging."

The trade journal said the maintenance problem has mushroomed into something approaching major proportions.

"Blast furnaces, open hearths and rolling mills are showing the effect of long months of wear and tear," it revealed. "The mortality on open hearths is reflected in the failure of mills to meet production schedules."

Output this week is scheduled at 94 per cent of capacity, up two points from last week.

Belfrage is being deported for refusing to answer questions by Senate committee when it was chaired by Senator Joseph McCarthy (R), Wisconsin, during an investigation of a wartime press project.

Belfrage was editor of the New York weekly periodical National Guardian. (International)

The Communist ruled Asiatic mainland might use atomic weapons against Japan.

The present plan is for Japan to complete its defense program by 1959. It calls for an army, navy and air force totaling 250,000 men. Then, the last United States troops will be pulled out, and Japanese people will breathe easier.

Parents Refused Custody Of Child Movie And TV Star

LOUISVILLE, Aug. 17 (UP)

Juvenile Court Judge Louis Jull Tuesday refused to give the custody of child movie and television star Linda Bennett to her parents here in favor of her aunt.

The child, who has appeared in many television productions and several recent films, has lived with her aunt, Mrs. Jack Bennett, Los Angeles, since she was an infant.

Grider said when he turned the child over to Mrs. Bennett he was having financial troubles because of his rather large family. The Grideres have seven other children.

He said, however, that he now heads a box and crate manufacturing firm and that Mrs. Grider want her back. They complained before Tuesday's hearing that the only time they now see their daughter is "at the movies or on television."

Even before Jull's decision, the Grideres filed a writ of habeas corpus directing that Mrs. Bennett bring Linda before Jefferson Circuit Court Judge Macauley Smith for a hearing Aug. 24.

Jull said at Tuesday's hearing that while realizing that parents have a legal and moral right to the child he considered the present arrangements in keeping with her best interests.

Linda recently appeared in the film, "The Seven Little Foys," starring Bob Hope and "The Creature with the Atom Brain." She had television roles in the "Mickey" series and "TV Readers Digest."

Jull said at Tuesday's hearing that while realizing that parents have a legal and moral right to the child he considered the present arrangements in keeping with her best interests.

Linda recently appeared in the film, "The Seven Little Foys," starring Bob Hope and "The Creature with the Atom Brain." She had television roles in the "Mickey" series and "TV Readers Digest."

Grider said when he turned the child over to Mrs. Bennett he was having financial troubles because of his rather large family. The Grideres have seven other children.

He said, however, that he now heads a box and crate manufacturing firm and that Mrs. Grider want her back. They complained before Tuesday's hearing that the only time they now see their daughter is "at the movies or on television."

Even before Jull's decision, the Grideres filed a writ of habeas corpus directing that Mrs. Bennett bring Linda before Jefferson Circuit Court Judge Macauley Smith for a hearing Aug. 24.

Corn-Cooper Wedding Vows Solemnized In Beautiful Church Ceremony On Sunday

The wedding of Miss Jean Brooks Corn, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Herschel Clinton Corn, and Mr. William Willard Cooper, son of Mrs. Viola Cooper and the late Mr. Cooper of Cairo, Ill., was solemnized on Sunday, August 14, at four-thirty o'clock in the afternoon at the First Christian Church.

Rev. Howard Nichols, pastor of the church, officiated at the double-ring ceremony which was held before an altar backed with southern smilax and palms and centered with a large sunburst arrangement of white gladioli and large white chrysanthemums flanked with cathedral candelabras and floor standards holding arrangements of the same flowers.

The vows were said before a Swedish iron kneeling bench cushioned with white satin and garlanded with string smilax and gardenias. The pews were marked with white satin bows and nylon net.

Miss Lillian Watters, organist, and Miss Vernie Crogan of Cairo, Ill., soloist, presented a program of musical music. Miss Watters' selections included "O Lovely Night," Offenbach; "I Love You Truly," Bond; "Theme From the Fifth Symphony," Tchaikovsky; "To A Wild Rose," MacDowell; and "Claire de Lune," Debussy. Miss Crogan sang "The Song of Ruth," Dunham; "Through the Years," Youmans; and "The Lord's Prayer," Mahler, as the couple knelt for the benediction. The traditional wedding marches were used as the processional and the recessional.

Bride's Dress—Entering on the arm of her father, who gave her in marriage, the bride wore a floor-length gown of exquisitely embroidered ivory ed Swiss organdy over tulle. The bouffant tiered skirt was poised over hoops and crinolines and the hemline was marked with a deep puff of illusion which tapered into a graceful sweep train. The fitted bodice featured an off-the-shoulder neckline and short sleeves with self-covered buttons down the back. She wore matching organdy gaiters. Her fingertip veil of imported French illusion cascaded from a Priscilla headpiece of net entwined with seed pearls. She wore a single strand of pearls, gift of the bridegroom, and carried a white Bible topped with white orchids, stephanotis, and lilies of the valley showered with satin ribbons.

Attending the bride were Mrs. James Parker, matron of honor; Miss Fiedia Austin, cousin of the bride; and Mrs. Mac Catlett of Frankfort, bridesmaids. They wore identical water-length dresses of pink crystalite over tulle which featured a torso waist line and v-shaped surplus bust line of matching pleated nylon chiffon which also formed a v in the back. The bouffant circular skirts were worn over hoops and crinolines. They wore matching pink shoes and short white gloves. Their head-dresses were of pink velvet tubing and sweetheart roses with short veils of illusion. They carried Chantilly lace fans to which were attached corsages of sweetheart roses tied with pink chiffon lace ribbon.

Flower Girl—Little Miss Sandra Costello, cousin of the bride, served as flower girl. She wore a water-length dress of pink nylon net over tulle, fashioned with a torso waistline and very full skirt worn over crinolines. She wore matching pink shoes and scattered red lined with pink illusion, the bouffant of which was tied with sweetheart roses and matching chiffon lace ribbon.

Mr. Gray Cooper of South Holland, Ill., served as his brother's best man. The groomsmen were Messrs. Clegg F. Austin, cousin of the bride; Joe Pat Hackett of Hammond, Ill.; Don Turner and Eddie Klein of Cairo, Ill. Mrs. Corn, mother of the bride, wore a blue lace dress over tulle with which she wore a matching velvet hat and blue shoes. At her neckline was pinned a corsage of aristocratic roses. Mrs. Cooper chose for her son's wedding a pink sheer dress with avocado-velvet hat and matching shoes. She wore a corsage of pink sweetheart roses.

Reception—Immediately following the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Corn entertained with a reception at their home on the Mayfield Road.

The house was beautifully decorated throughout in a color scheme of pink and white. Mrs. Alfred Lindsey presided at the register which was placed on a table on the front terrace. The table was covered with an imported white lace cloth held an epergne holding cherubs and sweetheart roses.

Mrs. J. I. Hosick and Mrs. James Rudy Albright greeted the guests at the door. The receiving line composed of Miss Corn, Mrs. Cooper, the bride's cousin, Mrs. Parker, Mrs. Catlett, and Mrs. Austin, stood in front of a table holding an arrangement of pink gladioli and pink dyed Fuji chrysanthemums. On the arch above the receiving line was entwined southern smilax and a cluster of pink bells tied with illusion.

The mantel in the living room held an arrangement of Bells of Ireland and Fujimums and gladioli flanked with crescent arrangements of Hawaiian lagoonpodium and Scotch broom centered with large pink mums. The stairway was entwined with sprigged fern. At other vantage points throughout the house were arrangements of flowers in pink.

Mrs. Tom Rowlett greeted the guests at the door of the room in which the gifts were on display. Mrs. C. C. Farmer and Mrs. Charles Costello assisted in entertaining in the living room.

Beautiful Appointment—Mrs. Chad Stewart presided at the cake table which was placed in the sun room and was covered with a pink satin and nylon net floor-length cloth. The table was centered with a five-tiered wedding cake, topped with a miniature bride's bouquet of lilies of the valley and stephanotis and encir-led with string smilax and frosted white grapes and gardenias. On each side of the cake were white cherub candelabras holding arrangements of string smilax and garlanded carnations and burning white tapers. Around the edges of the table was garlanded string smilax caught at the corners with gardenias.

Mrs. A. B. Austin invited the guests to the back terrace where punch was served from a white wrought iron table holding an arrangement of white flowers. Mrs. Gene Landolt presided at the punch bowl. Assisting in serving were Mrs. Mike Overbey, Mrs. Edd Griffin, Mrs. J. K. Farmer, Mrs. Ace McReynolds, Mrs. Autry Farmer, Mrs. John Irwin, and Mrs. O. E. Boone, Jr.

Small packages of rice tied in pink net which were showered on the bride and bridegroom as they left the house were given to each guest by little Miss Sandra Costello.

Out of town guests included Mr. and Mrs. Harry Lee Waterfield, Clinton; Mr. and Mrs. Charlie McClain, Paris, Tenn.; Mrs. Laurence Uiter, Mr. H. L. Minton, Mr. and Mrs. Egbert A. Smith, Mr. and Mrs. Albert J. Lee, Mrs. Peyton Berbling, Mr. and Mrs. Harry E. Emerson, Miss Margaret R. Shoemaker, Miss Jeanne Shoemaker, Mr. and Mrs. R. # Alcoholism Nutritional Disease

By DELOS SMITH

NEW YORK (AP) — Three nutritional scientists urge the truth of this "broad" principle: A "wisdom of the body," chemical in nature, may be influencing our minds to the food when we select our food and drink.

When our customary diet nourishes us properly, this "wisdom of the body" is strengthened and it comes harder and harder for us to settle for food and drink which do not provide sufficient nourishment.

But when our customary diet is improper—nutritionally speaking—the "wisdom of the body" is weakened, the selection of food and drink becomes more nutritionally foolish, and so nutritional deficiencies pile up.

Drs. Roger L. Williams, Lorene L. Rogers and Richard B. Pelton of the biochemical institute, University of Texas, based their views on precise experiments with rats which demonstrated that deficient diets caused those animals to increase their consumption of alcohol or sugar—and thus increase their nutritional deficiencies.

Alcoholics Poorly Nourished

They saw a definite parallel between the nutritional habits of rats and people although they agreed with other scientists that this parallel could not be drawn too closely. The ultimate point of their experiments is that in some people alcoholism can be a nutritional disease.

It is a well known fact that most alcoholics are very poorly nourished—they simply do not consume the food and drink which provide sufficient vitamins, minerals, and other dietary essentials.

Some scientists have argued however, that experiments with rats have no bearing on human beings because 1 rats don't drink alcohol to get drunk and 2 rats will turn from alcohol to sugar if given a chance, but human beings won't.

The Texas scientist denied that alcoholics always sought drunkenness "even though" it is a widely taught doctrine. "It is often a part," they said in the Yale Quarterly Journal of Studies on Alcohol. Alcohol craving, they continued, "may not in its origin be fundamentally unlike other cravings, for example, of a herbivorous animal for salt, or a dehydrated individual for water, except that like the craving some diabetics have for sugar and narcotic addicts for narcotics, it is a craving which leads toward physiological harm rather than benefit."

Rats Not Drunkards

"It seems clear that rats, when they consume alcohol, do not contemplate or anticipate drunkenness, but the important gustatory signals which are involved in human alcoholism may be paralleled in rats, and these signals may be induced in rats and in humans by the same fundamental mechanism—nutritional deficiency."

Only superficially do rat bodies handle nutritional elements like human bodies. They pointed out that rats build their own ascorbic acid from sugars, but human beings must get ascorbic acid from their diets. With many diets, rats can get along without niacin but human beings need niacin whatever their diet. These differences could explain why rats will turn from alcohol to sugar but human beings will not, they said.

They did not suggest that nutritional deficiencies were all there is to alcoholism. Their studies demonstrated all over again that the individuality of rats parallels the individuality of human beings—each rat and each human being is different from all other rats and human beings. Heredity makes for this individuality, and that is why their "broad principle" had to be "broad."

"Spacemen" Land On Lawn

By MILTON MACGRUBER
United Press Staff Correspondent
WASHINGTON (AP)—Well, sir, you could have knocked the old-timers off with a ray gun when they spotted two creaky spacemen at the Capitol today.

landed— theoretically—in a flying saucer on the Senate lawn. They clomped through the building, and departed down the long flight of stairs of the opposite House wing.

And theoretically, other spacemen landed at the White House and in the streets of downtown Washington.

The "spacemen" were Fred Gabouri and Ed Saenz, Hollywood stuntmen. They are in the cast of a science-fiction movie being filmed by Columbia Pictures.

Reluctant—He Says

Producer Charles Schnee was reluctant—that's what he said—to discuss the movie in detail, but he said it is about "satellites" and "outer space." He said the movie's title and its stars have not been decided upon yet.

Gabouri and Saenz looked like mechanical men in grey fibreglass suits and domed eyecaps hoods. They were photographed descending the steps leading to the House chamber.

Walking on Earth proved difficult for men used to space. Their suits were stiff and they had only small pinholes in their hoods for vision.

"Where'd they come from—Mars?" a reporter asked.

From Outer Space

"We don't know," Schnee cautiously replied. "They came from outer space." He gestured vaguely toward the sky.

"How did they get here?"

"They landed in a flying saucer on the Senate lawn," he said.

The movie, he added, would have others like them landing at the White House and at other spots downtown. Schnee indicated the actual landings would be filmed in trick shots with "backdrops" showing the Senate wing of the Capitol, the White House, and other public buildings.

He said he expects the film to be ready for release in about six months.

Earth-bound exercise may get some of the creaks out of the spacemen's joints by that time.

Your Built-in "Air Conditioner" . . . Fans Give It the Extra Zip Needed

By IRA MILLER
Farm Electrification Bureau

With your fevered brow baking and the corn "popping" in the broiling sun, it may be hard to believe, but . . . your body has its own built-in "air conditioning" system. Of course it may need a little help to function effectively, but it has one nevertheless. Here's how it works: when the temperature rises you start to perspire; when the perspiration evaporates quickly, you feel cooler.

Now, there's very little difficulty in perspiring in hot weather. The trick is to get rid of excess perspiration quickly. And, you can do it if you keep the air around you in motion.

Take an uncomfortably warm house on a hot day, for example. You can keep it cool inside if you apply a few simple principles. In the daytime, summer outdoor air is warmer and more humid than air indoors. So—close the doors and windows and pull down the shades or blinds so that heat can not be transferred into the house from outside. Don't worry about lack of air. There's plenty of it inside the house. All it needs is motion to overcome any feeling of stuffiness. An electric fan or fans of the proper rating and correctly located will do an efficient air circulation job for you at little cost.

Fans circulate a given number of cubic feet of air per minute, and this data appears on their nameplates. To get the right size of fans needed, therefore, you must first know the cubic feet of air in the room to be cooled. This is done by multiplying the length of the room x the length x the height. Say this comes to 2,000 cubic feet. Therefore, a fan or fans with a total rated capacity of at least 2,000 cubic feet per minute (CFM) will move the air in this room once every minute. In cooler climates a 2 or 3-minute air circulation cycle may be adequate.

Be sure, too, that your fans are located correctly. Figures 1, 1A, 2 and 3 show different types of fans available and the different patterns of air which each creates to cool off your room.

FIG. 1—Non-oscillating fan blows air in straight line.

FIG. 1A—Non-oscillating fan tilted upwards blows air toward ceiling breaking up into smaller currents which give circulation without creating draft.

FIG. 2—Oscillating fan moves air back and forth in irregular pattern, so persons in immediate vicinity quickly feel cooling effect.

FIG. 3—Floor fan in center of room provides pattern of air movement for general circulation.

challenging. Nefretiri and her royal henchwomen also thought feet were glamorous. They made their toes, heels and soles rosy with carmine, and hemmed the nails; adorned them with anklets and toe rings. Might be an idea for the beach this summer but gently though, someone might think you'd stepped on an old pop bottle.

Mankures? Yes, but what agony. They soaked clothes in henna, laid them across their palms, clenched their little fists, tied them and stayed that way all night. They didn't have to worry about hairdos because Egyptian belles were all clipped as bald as billiard balls. Wigs were high fashion for cleanliness and comfort. The climate along the Nile was scorching and wigs were a blessing—they could always take them off on a boudoir.

Perfume didn't exist. But the gals aroused their swains with oils, ointments and unguents. This was achieved by soaking flower petals in oils.

One trick was to set a gorgeously perfumed candle on the noggin, light it and wait. Must have smelled divine—but can you imagine scraping melted wax out of last night's wig or eyebrows?

Anne Baxter Tells Makeup Problems

Editor's Note: Aline Mosby is on vacation. Guest columnist Anne Baxter writes about her makeup problems in playing a queen of Egypt.

By ANNE BAXTER
Written For The United Press

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—Ever since Eve's pearly white teeth bit into that apple, there's been a booming market in femmes fatales or reasonable facemasks.

Partly because I'm an actress, but chiefly because I'm a woman, I've been doing research in the field of feminine allure since I was about ten. Now my knowledge of beauty secrets has been greatly enlarged by playing the role of Nefretiri, the queen of Egypt, in Cecil B. DeMille's "Ten Commandments."

Nefretiri ruled the glamor arena some 3,200 years ago, and it's surprising how much the ladies of that day knew about the art of stalking a man.

The eye, someone said, is the window of the soul and the Egyptian beauties seemed to know that it was an extremely lethal weapon. They were experts at dramatizing the eyes.

The big difference between eyes then and now was in the amount of paint applied. We don't like obvious make-up in 1955. They had terrible mirrors of burnished copper and I wondered if the Egyptian glamor girls evered things a trifle because they just plain couldn't see enough to be subtle.

Wide, soft lines of kohl soot or charcoal in oil, outlined the eyes in reverse wing curves. Powdered malachite in silver, a blue-green, glistened over—and just under the eye. Cheeks were tinted with an ointment of red clay.

Their lipstick was pure carmine. Sounds a bit thick, doesn't it? But their eyes were larger and brighter, their mouths softer and more

Dodgers Need Stadium With Parking Space

By JOHN GRIFFIN
United Press Sports Writer
BROOKLYN, N.Y. - The Brooklyn Dodgers, stung by the stay-at-home tactics of fans once considered the most fanatic in baseball, took the first step out of Brooklyn today.
By arranging to play seven of their home games next season in Jersey City, N.J., and announcing they hope to vacate Ebbets Field after the 1957 season, the Dodgers issued a pretty plain warning that poor attendance could make them leave town permanently.
It's the first time in modern baseball history that a major-league team has "fanned out" any of its home games.
And it's the first time in history that a pennant-winning team, as the Dodgers are almost certain to be this season, has gone out of their home town for any home games.
With Dodger attendance far off during the last two seasons, club President Walter O'Malley put the finger on the parking problem as the reason for the slump. Time was, O'Malley pointed out, folks in Brooklyn used to come to Ebbets Field by trolley - the team's present name was shortened from the nickname "Trilley Dodgers." Now, O'Malley said, to come by car and there is parking space for only 700 cars at Ebbets Field.
If the Dodgers are going to stay in Brooklyn, says O'Malley, they must find a site for a new stadium, which has parking facilities for at least 2,000 cars. They've been looking for such a site since 1948.
"The matter has progressed to the point where a final engineering and legal study will be made," said O'Malley. "The result will determine the future of the Dodgers."

MARRIAGE FOR THREE

By ELIZABETH SEIFERT

SYNOPSIS
The post-war housing shortage in Kentucky, Missouri, had induced the newly wed Laura, Adam and Ann, to engage in a home building business. Adam, an experienced carpenter, had secured with the bank during the war a loan to build a house. The local lumber mill, so heavily formed a partnership of sorts and set out to build a home for the people of Kentucky. But they made the mistake of first of all building for themselves. Need of cash for the business soon forced the sale of that home. Ann, a young housewife, left her job, and Adam, a young man, left his job, and they were left with a big hand down on his thigh when Ann told him she didn't have much time anymore. "Why don't you have some?" He stopped, though, before he pointed out that this small apartment should not occupy her as much as... He waited.
"Oh," she said softly, "I like to help with things for the church. They're having a cooked food sale Saturday - and then I sit with Veda's children, sometimes. She doesn't have good maid."
Veda was her sister-in-law. In return for all the years when Ann had lived with Wendel and Veda, Adam could not object to her helping there. He sat thoughtful.
"But the main thing I do," Ann went on, after a pause, "is to take care of the clerical work for the blood bank."
Adam looked at her in surprise. "You knew they had one at the railroad hospital?"
"Yes, but I didn't know that you - you're not getting paid for it, are you?"
"I couldn't afford to pay much. No, I'm not being paid. But there's quite a bit of clerical work - and - especially when there's been a bad accident, or a serious operation that calls for more blood than we have on hand - I scurry around and get donors, talk them into giving blood, hold on to them until they do it." She was smiling, and Adam regarded her curiously.
"You sound as if you like that work."
"I do like it. You - You don't mind do you, Adam?"
"I guess a man couldn't mind work like that, Ann," he said grumpily. "Not without sounding more of a heel than I'd want to sound."
He said no more, and Ann picked up her book, but her mind was on this new interest which she had found. It was a wonderful thing, working for the blood bank! The thought that she helped save lives, fostered health - and besides, she found the atmosphere of the hospital stimulating, the business, the friendliness and kindness of the personnel - especially of Dr. Alexander, the chief surgeon.
He had been very kind to Ann, and understanding. In spite of being an extremely busy man, he had taken time to explain to her all about the blood bank. "You'll do the paper work more happily, you know what it's all about." Of course she would, and did. She was grateful to Dr. Alexander. His courtesy and interest continued. She began to look forward to his appearance in the doorway of the small office she used, to his inquiry for her health, his comment, perhaps, on the dress she wore, or her hair.

"I wish you'd teach my wife how to fix her hair," he blurted one day when the light was falling in a shining band across Adam's smooth locks.
She laughed. "She wouldn't appreciate it, Dr. Alexander."
He came on into the room, tall, broad-shouldered in a white smock and trousers. Ann was young and beautiful, but she was an "older man." He was forty, perhaps, married, and with two little girls. "Mary knows now, I feel," he defended himself. "I tell her to go to the beauty parlor. Far goah sakes, but when she does - she comes back with her hair all frizzed, and looks worse than ever."
"There's a difference in hair, you know. Mrs. Alexander may have trouble with the texture of her hair, or maybe -" she broke off lamely, embarrassed.
"Does that cover crooked seams in her stockings, and the way her slip creases shows?"
Ann looked at the big man in surprise.
"I shouldn't talk this way," he admitted. "But I like neat women. Ann, and she knows I do."
He talked to Ann about his children, too, and about his mother. She was semiretired, but Mary wouldn't let her be brought to their home. "I'd keep a nurse," the doctor defended his stand. "It doesn't seem right not to have her with us. She'd be some trouble, but I was some trouble to her in my time. If Mary ever gets into that state, will she want the girls to refuse her housework?"
As she got to know him better, when she had met Mary, a friendly person, but undoubtedly frowzy, while Dr. Alexander was meticulous in his dress - his suits beautifully tailored, his accessories in perfect taste - when she had met the two plump little girls, Ann felt that she understood the big doctor's problems. She didn't offer much in the way of comfort and nothing in the way of advice - but she made a sympathetic listener.
Often the doctor drove her home from the hospital. He lived in her neighborhood. Ann had no car - it seemed natural enough for him to do this. He was just a big kind. And she was honestly surprised when Wendel, her brother, told her she'd better not ride around in Doc Alexander's Cadillac so often; it was making quite a little talk in town.
She was so surprised that she stared up at him as if that talk had come from a stranger. "Why that's crazy! I don't ride around. I work for the hospital blood bank. Every one out there is very thoughtful." "Nobody sees you with anyone but the Doc."
Ann's brother was a blond and florid man; his round face now was flushed, his eyes distressed about the conversation which he had felt it his duty to have with his pretty sister. "I'm just warning you to be careful, kid," he said anxiously.
"Careful about what? I work at the hospital several afternoons a week. I leave about the same time that Dr. Alexander does, and he gives me a lift home. That's all anyone could have seen or talked about."

"Yeah, I know, but -"
"Adam knows I work for the blood bank. It's all right with him."
Wendel coughed, got out of his handkerchief and wiped his face. He wished he'd stayed out of this, and Ann and her gossiping friends.
Ann was speaking more reasonably now. "We live in that little cooped-up apartment. Wendel, I have almost nothing to do, while Adam is so terribly busy. We both thought this work at the hospital was a good idea."
"Yeah, I know. Adam's busy. Too busy, maybe."
"Well, he has to do his work when it comes to him! You know that!"
"Sure, sure," said Wendel in a conciliatory tone. "I just - well, you're a pretty girl, sis -"
"I used to be pretty," she said thoughtfully.
"What?"
"I look in the mirror a dozen times a day. Wendel, I know I'm not pretty any more."
"That's silly!"
"It is not silly. I'm not pretty. At least, not as pretty as I was when Adam - when Adam used to love me!"
Wendel took a deep breath. "If you aren't a crazy kid! I love you! I love you! Of course, you've been married two years and more; every man gets busy and forgets to tell his wife he loves her - but I guess no reason for you to do anything silly."
"I haven't done anything silly. I found some work to fill in my spare time. However it may look to you - and to the people here in town - that's all I've done."
"Oh, how look, sis. Everybody thinks Adam - well, he did wrong to sell your house right over your head, and the way he works all hours - Nobody blames you, kid. But they do talk!"
Ann laughed. "Well, they can hardly blame Adam for my being seen with Dr. Alexander!"
Wendel looked affronted, and she patted his arm where it lay on the door-edge of his car. He had seen her on the street, and had pulled up to have this talk with her. "Please don't worry, Wendel," she said earnestly. "Don't pay any attention to gossip. You know what this town can do along that line. Houses don't mean as much to Adam as they do to me. He got a chance to sell ours, and did. I was unhappy about it, and I still am - but Adam and I are all right. Both of us."
"I only -"
"I know, dear. And thank you for worrying. But believe me, there's no reason. So - bye, now." She shifted the bag of groceries in her arm and went on down the street. Wendel watched her, his face troubled. She looked all right, and she sounded all right. But - just the same - people were talking!

Li'l Abner is 21, today!!

Twenty-one years ago, Li'l Abner was born - in a log cabin, natchery!!

At that time, he looked like this - and I looked like this!!

Well, Li'l Abner still looks like this - but, here's what happened to me!!

Since then, Li'l Abner has acquired a wife - and a baby. I started with a wife - and a baby. But, since then, I've acquired two more - (kids, I mean)

And one brand-new grandchild, now helping her father complete his tour of Army duty in Germany.

Wonderful things have happened to Li'l Abner in these years. Sadie Hawkins Day has become the horror of all trembling American bachelorhood a relentless national holiday!! And then there was the Shmoo!!

Twenty-one years ago, only a few people knew how stupid Li'l Abner was. Today, they know how stupid he is, all over the world!! Such is fame. And, while these years nations have sniped at each other, on this best of all pages, the comic page - we still all laugh at each other!! Good to be with you

Editor's Note: Aline Mosby is on vacation. Al and Elma Milotte, the famed husband-wife camera team, who photograph wild life for Walt Disneyland films, tell about their adventures.

HOLLYWOOD — It's quite an education to see animal creation in operation. Our latest lesson was in equatorial Africa where for almost three years we photographed birds, beasts and reptiles of the Kenya and Tanganyika wilds for Walt Disney's new, true-life adventure, "The African Lion."

During that time we lived almost literally in the lion's den, watching the king of beasts and his queen in every act and mood of courtship, hunt, battle and play. There's no great trick about photographing wild animals. You just get as close as you can, without disturbing them and start your camera. Of course you've got to know where and when to find them. For Walt Disney's films no human must ever be seen and the animals must not know they are being observed.

Several times we got too close to lions for comfort, and once dangerously close to a bull rhino. When we tried to play good samaritan to this mud-trapped fellow he resented being rescued and almost got Al.

The most trying thing about our profession is the wear on the nerves from the constant vigilance for interesting and significant incidents. During our time in the Africa-wilds there was scarcely a daylight hour when one of us was not standing watch beside the cameras for some revealing act in the life and death drama always going on around us.

Nature hides her mysteries with jealous care. The lion, because he fears nothing, is the most open in his home and family life. And he's almost the most affectionate of all the great beasts.

The most ferocious exhibition of jealousy we ever saw occurred in a group of adult lions. A roving young female attempted to win the attentions of a lioness shah away from his established harem mate. She was a stranger. They turned on her in a flash and literally tore her to pieces in outraged defense of their domestic proprieties.

On the other hand, we never saw a greater display of maternal affection than that lavished on their children by African lionesses. If ever babies of the wild are spoiled, these cubs are. But no trace of juvenile delinquency is tolerated. For even the sons of the king of beasts may die if the stern laws of existence are flouted.

The bravest animal we saw in our 50,000-mile journey was a little warhog, probably the ugliest of all animals, defending to the death her brood of youngsters against a pair of savage hyenas — a noble show of fierce, defensive motherhood.

For two years and eight months a specially built four-wheel drive truck was our home as well as camera, blind. Several times it broke down and had to make emergency repairs on the spot. We carried food and water for a month's supply out of Nairobi. Once we narrowly evaded encounter with a band of prowling Mau Mau. Solitude, the company of animals, we are used to.
